Dear HR/Recruitment Manager,

As a Linux enthusiast I am excited and eager to begin a new career in Linux and I believe that I will make an excellent Junior Linux System Administrator due to the knowledge and skills I have acquired from working on my portfolio. Although I am an entry-level applicant, I am a motivated and enthusiastic hard worker who is passionate about doing a great job and is willing to further develop her skills as well as acquire new skills in the field.

I have a strong aptitude for learning new skills and on top of working on my Linux skills, I have been teaching myself to script using the Python programming language. My undergraduate and postgraduate studies have equipped me with essential analytical, problem solving, team-working, and communication skills. I have work experience as a Support Worker and this job has taught me the importance of maintaining a high level of professionalism in the workplace and treating work colleagues with respect, working in accordance to the values and procedures of the company and avoiding any behaviour that would call into question my suitability to be employed within the company. I am confident that I can bring many strengths to your company such as my ability to grasp new concepts and ideas quickly and work unsupervised and under pressure while being proactive. I also possess the ability to work with people from different social, economic and career backgrounds and can respond swiftly to different challenging situations and provide creative solutions to problems.

I would very much like to discuss any career opportunities within your company and how my current skills can help you achieve any of your upcoming goals. Thank you for taking the time to look at my portal. I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely

Tatenda Manyepa
